HELP KOLPING SERVE OUR COMMUNITY

Members, we are going to be expanding upon the great volunteering work that Kathy Weinborg and other Kolping members have already undertaken in Westchester by trying to arrange some volunteer opportunities in the city.

We plan to have a few opportunities each year for a group of members (whether large or small) to come together to volunteer in different ways in the city. If you can get involved, that would be great.

The first city volunteer event that we are coordinating is with Xavier Mission in Manhattan. Xavier organizes a large soup kitchen every Sunday and is always in need of volunteers. We are realistic and starting small with trying to get a group of about 10 Kolping members to volunteer at Xavier Mission one Sunday in the next month or so. Every Sunday, Xavier's soup kitchen serves an average of 1,300 hot meals—amazing!

In the future, we will also plan on volunteering with Catholic Charities, St Joseph (Yorkville) and St Philip Neri (Grand Concourse). Initiatives will also continue in Westchester.

If you can volunteer in the city or would like more information, please contact Frank Weigand at fweigand@gmail.com or 718 908 3650.

Mother's Day at KOH

Mothers Day blessed us with lots of rain for the flowers and the farmers' crops but the good spirits of our Kolping members made the day warm and wonderful. Manager Heidi Umland had the property ready and beautiful to welcome us all for the kickoff to our summer season. Chef Kathy Weinberg whipped up some amazingly delicious roast beef in the new ovens accompanied by mashed potatoes, green beans, Deutscher Salat and a dessert of peach Melba. Sous-chefs Mike Weinberg and Nick Colletti provided lots of tasty advice and strong arms. Christine Kern and her lovely daughter Danielle kept up with the busy crowds at the bar and everyone who came to Montrose on May 12th thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Fr. Bretone traveled up from the City to lead us in celebrating Mass in Assmuth Hall. Don Simon provided music for our worship and Therese Portilla crowned our Blessed Mother with a beautiful floral wreath.

Kentucky Derby

The Ahrens-Scheuermann-Cantu family spearheaded a Kentucky Derby party for our Kolping family. Christine Kern whipped up some special libations —mint juleps, anyone? We nervously watched the thoroughbreds take to the very wet and muddy track at Churchill Downs and were relieved when the horses and their jockeys finished safely. We cheered Maximum Security when it appeared that he had won and watched the somewhat historic actions as the Stewards disqualified him and announced that Country House had won the Derby. We thank all our Kolping members who organized and made this a fun day for the rest of us. The Belmont Stakes is coming up soon....anyone have ideas for a get-together?

Kate Smith's niece demands 'cowardly' Yankees let fans decide on ban

[The New York Post, by Dean Balsamini]

Submitted by Martin A. Kelly

Kate Smith's niece is standing up for her beloved aunt and her rendition of "God Bless America."

"The people on the Yankees who did this are cowards," said a furious Suzy Andron, 72, of the team's decision to stop playing Smith's 1938 recording of the patriotic favorite.

The Bombers' ban came amid allegations that two of Smith's songs had racist lyrics, including a 1939 tune called "That's Why the Darkies Were Born."

The heartbroken niece is demanding a meeting with Yankees executives and wants fans to decide if her beloved aunt's rousing performance of "God Bless America" — which became a seventh-inning stretch staple at Yankee Stadium following the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks — should continue.

The niece said she's received an avalanche of support from fans since the controversy surfaced, and it's emboldened the family to publicly crusade to clear Kate Smith's name.

"Aunt Kathryn didn't have a racist bone in her body. She loved everybody," Andron insisted.

"We're just shocked and aghast," she told The Post from her home in Raleigh, N.C. "I'd like to know who made this decision — this cowardly decision. The Yankees have not called. This was out of the blue."

The Androns read of the snub in the newspaper, including a Yankee statement that said they had become "aware of a recording that had been previously unknown to us and decided to immediately and carefully review this new information. The Yankees take social, racial and cultural insensitivities very seriously. And while no final conclusions have been made, we are erring on the side of sensitivity."

The Androns said the Yankees have failed to do their homework.

"Anybody who had done any research for more than five minutes would have seen the speeches she gave and honors she received for all her work to erase the bigotry, intolerance and racism that existed during her 50 years in show business," Andron's husband Bob, 74, said.

They cited her experience with Josephine Baker, who in 1927 became the first African-American to star in a major motion picture. Baker refused to perform before segregated American audiences, and when she returned to the US from France in 1951, found bookings scarce. Smith invited Baker to make her first TV appearance on her popular show, "The Kate Smith Evening Hour."

Following the untimely death of the legendary Nat King Cole, she joined Dionne Warwick and Sammy Davis Jr. on Oct. 3, 1965 for a benefit at Carnegie Hall for the Nat King Cole Cancer Foundation, billed as the First Annual Festival of Stars.

Suzy Andron said she wants the original accusers who branded her aunt a racist to come out of the shadows. "We don't understand why these people — the cowards — would pick on somebody who has been dead for 33 years," she said.

In her lifetime, Smith recorded over 3,000 songs and "there are two that she recorded in her 20s that have offended the sensitivities of some. She didn't write them — she sang them," Bob Andron said.

The Androns — who took care of a diabetic Smith the last eight years of her life — said fans should "have a chance to weigh in" on the ban, and extended the same advice to the Philadelphia Flyers, who also banned the song from their games and removed Kate Smith's statue after the Yankees acted.

"We are not commenting further than our original statement," Yankees spokesman Jason Zillo said in an email.

Andron wouldn't speculate if late "Boss" George Steinbrenner — who first ordered "God Bless America" played after 9/11 — would have made the same choice.

Kate Smith, a lifelong Yankees fan, is "a victim of a tyrant called political correctness," Bob Andron said.
