SARTORIUS SCHOLARSHIP

Graduates of St. Ignatius School in the Bronx visited K88 at the October Board Meeting. These eight scholars were selected as recipients of the Joseph Sartorius Memorial Scholarships.

St. Ignatius School grew out of the Nativity Mission School system that many are familiar with. St. Ignatius' guidance: "Love is shown more in deeds than in words" meshes beautifully with Father Kolping's directive to "let the needs of the times teach us what to do" when our Kolping Society steps up to help these young people achieve success. Their Mission statement is simple and direct: St. Ignatius School empowers students in the South Bronx to become their best selves by creating a safe and nurturing community that fosters intellectual, spiritual, and social growth. Their Vision is even more powerful: "Our hope for our students is that they may embody the Five Pillars of Jesuit education." They strive to help the young scholars be:

- Open to Growth
- Intellectually Competent
- Religious
- Loving
- Committed to Doing Justice

The eight students range from 9th-12th grades and are attending Catholic High Schools in New York—Mount St. Michael Academy, St. Jean Baptiste, Xavier, Cardinal Spellman, Cathedral and All Hallows. The youth are articulate and ambitious with college interests ranging from mental health to campus ministry to cheer and dance. The common threads that we heard were a welcoming of the challenges presented to them and an appreciation of the family feeling that they get in their Catholic High Schools.

For more information on St. Ignatius School, you can check out their website at www.sis-nativity.org.

Schlachtfest Dinner at KOH Photos by Jen Scheuermann and Joan Dengler

2018's Schlachtfest was a wonderful, fun-filled celebration of food and friends. Our Head Chefs, Jen Scheuermann and Kathy Weinborg led their team of talented helpers (Nick Colletti, Mike Scheuermann and Alfred Vogl) to make a great meal for all present.

John Reitter led us in grace before meals. Then the parade of deliciousness began. We started with cucumber slices, piped with a creamy cheese rosette and topped with a gloriously ripe half-tomato. Bratwurst and sautéed onions nestled into pretzel rolls followed. Next up were the potato pancakes—those Kartoffelpfannkuchen war sehr sehr gut! Even though we were sated with the first three courses, the Kassler Rippchen (smoked pork chops) with Sauerkraut and mashed potatoes came out next. The final course was a scrumptious Black Forest Cake. Kevin, Sophia, Emily and Alexa made a lot of trips back and forth from dining room to kitchen to make this wonderful meal run smoothly. Christine Kern staffed the bar with a delicious array of offerings to complement the food.

The day is made possible by Heidi Umland who oversees the planning and preparation of all our celebrations in Montrose and Rich Povilonis who ensures that our facilities and grounds are beautiful and well cared for. We were delighted to welcome back Kolping member Daniel Dengler who has been ordained a Dominican Priest and is now Father Pier Giorgio. Father presided at his first Mass in Assmuth Hall. His adorable nieces (the Reyes girls) helped in the Offertory procession.

175 Anniversary of St. Patrick Church submitted by Ann Hemsing

On Sunday, October 7, Archbishop Timothy Dolan celebrated Mass at St. Christopher St. Patrick Church in Verplank. The Mass commemorated the 175 anniversary of St. Patrick Church, the first church north of New York City. Kathy Weinborg and Bob Hemsing participated in the liturgy.

At the reception after mass Bob and Ann and Kathy and Mike reminded Cardinal Dolan of his visits to Kolping 88th Street. He was happy to recall his time (and food and drink!) there and is looking forward to another invitation!

German Cuisine is a Treat for Travelers submitted by Martin A. Kelly [Story based on article by Rick Steves/Sunday Oct 21, 2018 Daily News]

Sampling one of Germany's hundreds of varieties of sausage from a street vendor is a classic German experience. (Rick Steves' Europe)

There has been an invasion of Germany; not by armed forces, but by chefs! Traditionally, German cuisine has been sausages—hundreds of varieties of Bratwurst, Weisswurst, etc., sauerkraut and potatoes. It's a fast, tasty staple of the Germanic diet. Most restaurants offer it (often as the cheapest thing on the menu), but it's more commonly eaten at take-out fast-food stands. You may even see portable human hot-dog stands – cooks in clever harnesses that let them grill and sell hot dogs while standing under an umbrella. But something new has been added—get ready for surprises on the menu.

Because of the nearness of foreign cultures and their own dishes, the German taste has been amalgamated. For example, in the west where Germany shoulders up to France, look for Alsatian Flammkuchen, a version of white pizza, on a thin, yeastless dough; the classic version is topped with bacon and onions. In the east, where Germany neighbors Poland and the Czech Republic, you'll find Königsberger Klopse, meatballs with capers and potatoes in a white sauce (a tasty ensemble ready to tease your palate), and Senfeier, hard-boiled eggs in mustard sauce served with potatoes. Up north in Berlin, Stolz Heinrich (grilled sausage in beer sauce) and Currywurst (basically grilled pork sausage smothered with curry sauce) reign supreme.

Other parts of Germany offer similar varieties of native dishes to augment the standard German fare which is putting Germany in the same league with France for fanciful dining.

And here's even more good news: Eating well in Germany is an amazing value—cheaper than in France, Britain, Italy or Scandinavia. Eating in Germany is a big part of the fun of traveling there. Ingredients are wonderful, traditions are prized, "modern German cuisine" is giving old dishes tasty and entertaining new twists, and small, creative foodie places are thriving in every city.

If We Learned from Dogs (author unknown)

submitted by Katherine and Walter Weigand

We would...

Always run to greet our loved ones when they come home.
Never pass up the opportunity to go for a joyride.
Experience the ecstasy of the wind in your face.
When it's in your best interest, practice obedience.
Let others know when they've invaded your territory.
Take naps and stretch before rising.
Run, romp, and play every day.
Thrive on attention and touching.
Avoid biting when a simple growl will do.
Stop to lie on your back on the grass.

Drink lots of water and lay under a shady tree on hot days.

Show when you're happy, let those who made you that way know it!

Forgive those who scold you and... show them you love them.

Delight in the simple joy of a long walk.

Eat with gusto and enthusiasm.

Stop when you have had enough.

Be loyal and never betray a friend.

Never pretend to be something you're not.

Never give up... if something you want is buried, dig until you find it.

And MOST of all... when someone is having a bad day, be silent, sit close by and let them know you love them
